

34. On the other hand, it also appears that Congress intended that cable companies be permitted to impose "reasonable charges or fees based on actual costs" of offering new tiers. One important question is whether cable operators should impose such costs on the initial offering of the new broadcast basic service or upon an initial retiering even of a different nature. Based on the experience of NYSCCT, together with the existing state statute which assures its subscribers are informed of changes and given a fair opportunity to exercise real choice, NYSCCT urges the Commission to prohibit the imposition of any charges for the initial retiering of a basic cable service. We suggest that the Commission consider a policy which would prohibit a cable operator from imposing any charge for a change of service tier that would exceed the charge for the initial installation of such service tier. In other words, cable operators should not make any profit on a change in service (or, indeed, on a change in equipment) which would exceed the profit made on an initial installation. Finally, since cable operators have every incentive to promote their services and to encourage subscribers to buy higher tiers, there is no reason for the Commission to establish rules concerning so-called "upgrade charges" except in the case, as in New York, where a programming service is moved from a lower to a higher tier. In those circumstances, the Commission should adopt the same approach as New York State.

35. Finally, the Commission proposes in paragraph 76 two alternatives applicable to changes in service and, in paragraph 77, similar alternatives applicable to changes in equipment. The Commission asks whether the charges should be based on actual cost plus a reasonable profit or only nominal costs when change in service requires more than the simple method of encoding a computer. As a general matter, it should be noted that if the Commission adopted a policy limiting the charges for all changes in services to nominal costs, a degree of subsidization would necessarily result. NYSCCT does not favor a policy that would place substantially the entire burden for changing services on regular subscriber rates. In this regard, it is perhaps useful to consider a hypothetical cable system in which services are truly "unbundled" and available on a per-program or per-channel basis -- a goal for the future offered by some parties but not shared by NYSCCT. One could reasonably assume that subscribers would add and subtract and otherwise change services in greater numbers with greater frequency in such a service. It would not seem particularly sound public policy to require subscribers to subsidize the "browsing" habits of other subscribers.

D. Implementation and Enforcement of Regulation of Basic Service Tier Rates

36. In paragraphs 79-89, the Commission discusses the implementation and enforcement of its regulations concerning the regulation of basic cable service. As noted, the minimum basic service consisting of a few local broadcast stations and even PEG channels historically has not been widely embraced by cable subscribers. While we certainly do not oppose such a limited service for those who either cannot afford additional cable programming or who simply do not desire the volume or diversity of cable services, a procedure for rate regulation should reflect the nature of the service. In any event, it seems clear that if regulation of basic service is to be meaningful, all rates for basic service in effect on the effective date of the Commission's regulations in systems not subject to effective competition must be subject to review by any franchising authority who has timely sought and attained certification. Based upon such review, said rates should be subject to reduction in the event they do not pass muster under the Commission's standard. We also believe that if the rates in effect on the effective date of the rules were first established after the effective date of the Cable Act of 1992, i.e., December 4, 1992, that the regulating franchising authority or the Commission should have the discretion to require refunds or credits to subscribers of any amounts paid in excess of a reasonable rate after December 4, 1992. This should apply to rates and charges for equipment and for installation as well as rates and charges for the installation of second sets.

37. Since under the new statute a local franchising authority is free to seek, or not to seek, certification as it chooses without any time limitation, the Commission must impose an initial period during which the franchising authority must seek certification if it wishes to review existing rates. NYSCTT believes that 60 days is a reasonable period within which a franchising authority must seek certification in order to be in a position to review rates in effect on the effective date of the regulations. Of course, the franchising authority may seek certification after that time but only for purposes of reviewing and approving subsequent proposed increases in the basic cable service.

38. We agree with the Commission that cable operators should be required to file with any franchising authority seeking certification a copy of its rates then in effect for all cable services, including in particular, all rates for basic cable service that would be within the jurisdiction of the franchising authority under Section 623(a) and (b). The Commission proposes alternative possibilities for franchising authority action on basic service rates. We believe that a period of 120 days from receipt of a notice or request for an increase in basic service rate within which the franchising authority must act (including any action required by local and state level franchising authorities) is appropriate, except in circumstances where an evidentiary hearing may be necessary. The alternative proposals that the cable operator may put the proposed increase in effect 30, 60 or 90 days after notice, subject to refund if ultimately rejected, are not without some merit, but they might focus too much attention upon the issue of refunds rather than the reasonableness of the proposed rate in the first instance.

39. The Commission asks whether the cable operator should bear the burden of demonstrating compliance with the Commission's standards in its notice. This would be a reasonable condition on a request for a proposed increase in basic service; however, it is doubtful whether it should be necessary for the cable operator to provide detailed justification in every notice to subscribers. Rather, it would seem sufficient that the detail be contained in the notice to the franchising authority. In New York, for example, a franchising authority would be required to publish notice of a hearing which notice would include the substance of the cable operator's claim to entitlement to a higher rate and also that such application would be available for public inspection.

40. In paragraph 87 of the NPRM, the Commission tentatively finds that franchising authorities should enforce the regulation of basic service rates and, in this regard, asks whether they should have the power to set a basic service rate if they deny a requested rate increase. As a practical matter, based on historical behavior, one might expect that if the franchising authority finds the proposed rate to be unjustified under the Commission's standards that negotiation concerning the appropriate rate would ensue and frequently result in an adjusted agreed upon rate. Since the decision to participate in these negotiations as well as the decision to accept a lower rate than proposed lies with the cable operator, there is no reason to constrain the franchising authority to an "either/or" decision. If the cable operator believes it is fully entitled to a higher rate and the franchising authority refuses, it may seek review of that decision. If a policy is in place where the cable operator has already implemented a proposed increase which was not subsequently approved by the franchising authority, the franchising authority should be deemed to have the power, consistent with local law, to enforce the reasonable rate by issuing an order requiring refunds or credits, which order may be subject to a stay pursuant to Commission rule, or otherwise, in the event that the cable operator seeks review of the franchising authority's decision.

41. The Commission also asks whether other remedies would be available to enforce the basic service rate provisions of the statute and its rules. Although it is quite clear that the Cable Act of 1992 does not require rate regulation as part of a franchise (as other types of regulation are so limited), the authority to issue fines and forfeitures in a manner consistent with procedures set forth in a franchise or other applicable state or local law should generally be available to enforce violations of basic rate regulation standards.

42. In paragraph 89 of the NPRM, the Commission asks for comment on how it might best ensure that cable operators inform subscribers of the availability of the basic service tier. Specifically, the Commission proposes to require initial written notice within 90 days or with three billing cycles of the effective date of the rules and notification in sales information distributed prior to installation and hookup and at the time of installation. In New York State, existing statutory law and NYSCTT regulations require periodic notice to subscribers of the service offerings of the cable television companies and the rates and charges therefor including notification at the time of installation and at the time any subscriber requests such information from the cable operator. NYSCTT urges the Commission to avoid any action which would appear to preempt similar requirements in state or local law (or franchise agreements) since it is impossible for the Commission to administer this requirement for the thousands of cable systems and millions of notices nationwide. The Commission should require by rule that the cable operator keep a public file containing true copies of notices given to subscribers concerning this and other matters pertinent to the new statute.

E. Complaint Procedures; Rate Reduction and Refund Procedures for Rates Found to be Unreasonable

43. In paragraphs 97-110 of the NPRM, the Commission discusses issues concerning appropriate complaint procedures and rate reduction and refund procedures for rates found to be unreasonable for cable programming services. Here, as with rates for basic service, we believe that it is clear that every rate for cable programming services in effect in systems without effective competition on the effective date of the rules is subject to complaint and review. If the rate was in effect on the effective date of the 1992 Act and is found to be unreasonable based on a timely complaint, the determination should include a rollback effective as of the date of the complaint. On the other hand (also consistent with our suggestion concerning basic service rates) if the rate found to be unreasonable was first established after December 4, 1992, the authority to require refunds or credits should be available.

44. Such a policy would give meaning to Section 623(h) of the 1992 Act which requires the Commission to promulgate regulations that will prevent evasion of its rate regulation provisions and specifically evasions resulting from retiering. As noted by the Commission in paragraph 127, the statute effectively encourages retiering. Therefore, the mere fact of retiering should not be considered in any way to constitute an evasion of the 1992 Act. Even if the rate regulation standards for basic and cable programming services are different, retiering to take advantage of such different standards could not be said to constitute per se an effort to evade the law. It is the understanding of NYSCCT that the anti-evasion section originated in the Senate Bill which permitted the direct regulation of the lowest priced service tier that achieved a 30% penetration rate. In that context, it was at least possible that a cable television operator might manipulate tiers in such a manner as to attempt to minimize the impact of direct regulation. Since that provision was deleted from the conference bill, the most obvious form of intentional effort to evade the statute would be to impose substantial rate increases between the effective date of the Act and the effective date of the Commission's regulations and hope that the increases would be grandfathered. A policy that would deprive the cable operator of the benefit of any such increase in excess of a reasonable rate for either service would justify the Congressional concern over efforts to evade.

F. Subscriber Bill Itemization

45. In Paragraphs 174 and 175 of the NPRM, the Commission reviews the amendment to Section 622(c) and seeks comment thereon. The language included in the amendment to Section 622(c) was contained in the Senate Bill which passed the Senate in January, 1992. Since there is no discussion of the provision in the Senate Report which accompanied the bill, it appears that it was added after the report was prepared. A provision containing "virtually identical" language¹² was included in Section 623 in the House Bill. The House language is discussed in House Report No. 102-628 at p. 86 wherein it is stated that: "[t]he Committee intends that such costs shall be included as part of the total amount a cable operator charges to cable subscriber for cable service." After stating that a bill for $30.00 cannot be phrased as $28.50 for cable service and $1.50 for a franchise fee [5%] the Committee concludes: "[t]hus, the bill would show a total charge of $30.00, but the cable operator would have the right to include in a legend a statement that the $30.00 basic cable service rate includes a five percent franchise fee, which amounts to $1.50." (Id.)

46. Even before the enactment of the 1992 Cable Act, certain cable companies in New York State had determined to show all or some of a franchise fee as a separate billable item on a cable operator's monthly bill. In certain cases, the franchise fee was added to an amount attributable to cable service -- much in the manner of a convention sales tax -- to reach a total amount due. In other words, these companies were treating a franchise fee as if it was a separate charge imposed directly upon the subscriber rather than as a cost component not dissimilar from numerous other costs borne by the cable operator.

47. On April 20, 1992, NYSCT issued a Statement of Policy (In the Matter of The Itemization of Franchise Fees on Subscriber Bills, Docket No. 90389, Order No. 92-217). We have since commenced a rulemaking proceeding wherein we propose to adopt a rule that would prohibit such practices. (A copy of the Statement of Policy is attached to these comments as Appendix B.) The Commission will see that one of the primary concerns of NYSCT is that franchise fees have historically been stated in franchise agreements as a percentage of gross revenues attributable to cable services provided by a cable television company. In other words, the franchise fee is computed only after the gross receipts are counted. Where a cable operator segregates a fee as a separate billable item the effect is often to act as if the amount attributable to the fee is not part of gross revenue.

48. Inherent in this practice is the notion that a cable operator can unilaterally modify the basis of the fee and, therefore, the amount due. This, in the judgment of NYSCT, is not what Congress intended to do either in 1984 by the adoption of Section 622 or by the 1992 amendment.

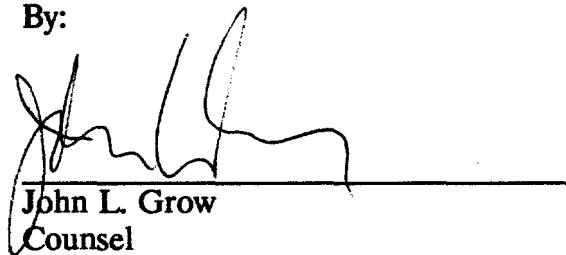

49. In paragraph 175 of the NPRM, the Commission refers to the House Report and states that it: "propose[s] to reflect this Congressional intent, in our rules incorporating Section 622(c)." We fully agree with the Commission's tentative proposal and we urge it to make this requirement a part of its final rules.
